Brent Burish
Chief Executive Officer, HCA Florida Pasadena Hospital

Brent Burish is the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) at HCA Florida Pasadena Hospital, a 307-bed hospital in St. Petersburg, Florida. HCA Florida Pasadena Hospital is comprised of approximately 500 caregivers and 200 medical staff members, and is currently undergoing over $10M in renovation projects which began in early 2022.

In 2005, Brent began his community-based hospital administration career, which to date, now includes over seven years of service as a hospital Chief Operating Officer and eight years as a hospital Chief Executive Officer. Brent joined HCA Florida Pasadena Hospital after serving as the Chief Operating Officer and Ethics and Compliance Officer at HCA Florida Fawcett Hospital, an expanding 253-bed hospital based in Port Charlotte, Florida. HCA Florida Fawcett Hospital encompasses six total campus locations including Free-Standing Emergency Departments and Ambulatory Surgery Centers.

Brent graduated summa cum laude from the University of Notre Dame with a Bachelor of Science in Biological Sciences in 2004 and magna cum laude from the University of Notre Dame's Mendoza College of Business with a Master of Business Administration (MBA) in 2005. Burish served as an Administrative Intern at Vanderbilt University Medical Center in 2004.

Brent previously served on multiple community boards including local Chamber of Commerce and Rotary International branches. He is a current member of the American College of Healthcare Executives. Brent and his wife Kathryn are the proud parents of four children.

HCAFloridaHealthcare.com