Jake Fisher

CEO
PALMS OF PASADENA HOSPITAL

Jake Fisher is the Chief Executive Officer of Palms of Pasadena Hospital, a 287-bed facility in St. Petersburg, Florida that is part of HCA's West Florida Division.

Mr. Fisher has more than 15 years of experience in healthcare and currently oversees the operations of Palms of Pasadena Hospital. He has worked for HCA for more than 10 years and assumed his current role as CEO in February of 2018. Prior to assuming his current role, Mr. Fisher served as the CEO of Tampa Community Hospital (formerly known as Town and Country Hospital) beginning in October of 2013.

Prior to assuming the CEO role in Tampa, Mr. Fisher served as the COO of Largo Medical Center, a 425 bed two campus teaching hospital in Largo, Florida; and Frankfort Regional Medical Center, a 169 bed community hospital in Frankfort, Kentucky. He joined HCA as an Associate Administrator in HCA's COO Development Program at LewisGale Medical Center in Salem, Virginia. He currently serves as an Executive Cabinet member for the American Heart Association's Go Red for Women.

Mr. Fisher holds an MBA from Duke University's Fuqua School of Business with a concentration in Health Sector Management and a BBA in Finance from the University of Wisconsin-Madison.

Mr. Fisher currently lives in Belleair with his wife, Katie and their four children.

HCA Palms Of Pasadena Hospital

Compassion, Community, Commitment