I wasn't able to call in today, so I would appreciate it if you could relay two questions I have to the doctors:

- 1) Will covid tests show positive for the common cold since it's also a coronavirus? (If it does, this will be a huge problem in determining case rate increase.)
- 2) Please have them look into T cell immunity. None of them addressed it nor did they give any evidence in favor of masks other than they had a hunch they're working. Mandating something for almost a million people because doctors think it is working but don't actually know for sure is ridiculous.

As for the delegation, I don't know that I can give candid thoughts on that and still remain respectful. Frankly, I think for every week you extend the mandate the least of your penance, especially for the job of being a public servant, is listening to your constituents. This sets a bad precedent and even those in support of masks should be against it because it won't always work in their favor.
