We know enough about this pandemic to know we don't know everything other than what is happening in other areas/countries that are not able to do proper distancing enforcement. It's not human nature to give up what they feel they want to do and they believe that because they are not sick they cannot pass this to others. We know that people that have no underlying conditions have died and that people who have had the virus have gotten second rounds. It's better to spend a couple more weeks waiting for the numbers to trend down than risk this going on longer.
